ARIZONA TIN MINES

New Mineral Discovery Made in Mohave County

The Kingman correspondent of the Republican says William J Roe, father-in-law of Henry Levin, sheriff of Mohave county, a prospector and miner, has been showing a few specimens of ore around Kingman that were a puzzle to all experts and ore sharps. The ore is very heavy, showing that it contains a large percentage of some dense metal, but assays failed to show either gold, silver, copper or lead. At last Mr Roe had it analyzed and was given a result showing 75 per cent tin. Mr Roe refuses to say where he found it, but as he had been prospecting in the porphyry range east of the Colorado river, it is believed that he found the float thereabouts.

Let Admiral Cervera be called to the stand in the Schley inquiry. He ought to know whose jurisdiction he was knocked out of.

CHANGE IN LAW

An Experiment Which Results Will Determine

The new laws which are now the law of Arizona, in force and effect, and there are several matters of interest to the live stock industry besides the new law exclusively their own. One of the several new departures in the repeal of the old statute making theft of an animal, regardless of its real value, grand larceny. I was argued that because of the severe penalty, convictions could not be had in the courts; that the stealing of a five dollar calf would not be considered grand larceny, even if the statute called it such, and that because of this a man charged with such offense would often be turned loose rather than give him an overpriced justice. As it now stands such an offender would come within the jurisdiction of the justice courts of the country, and while the penalty will not be so severe, justice will be more often meted out. The old way has been tried for many years, and it is a matter of history as to how the law worked. Now let the new law prevail for a while and it can be seen as to which of the statute will be more effective in keeping down crime of this nature. While the statute in its present form has many advocates, there are many others who believe that it will have an effect the very opposite from that hoped for. Time will tell.—Southwestern Stockman.

The New Comstock mine is showing up wonderful ore. In the drifts from the bottom of the shaft there seems to be no end to the ore and as yet no walls have been found. The manager, S C Bagge, is jubilating over his big success.—Kingman Miner.

Congress should proceed at the earliest opportunity to pass laws excluding anarchists who try to enter the United States, deporting those who are now in the country, and stripping all anarchists of American citizenship. They are avowed enemies of the government.

Years ago, when copper was in no demand, its discovery was a rarity. Now, however, with everybody looking for it, it is being found in every mining camp in the west. This seems to be a case of the "Shorn Lamb."

The liquid air companies which were advertising so extensively not long ago are having a mint of trouble with stockholders waiting a wage. It does not appear that any of the money received for stock went into building plants or that an ounce of liquid air has been sold for any commercial purpose. It is wonderful stuff for lecture room experiments, but it has no known commercial use.

United with the whole country in the respect and reverence due the memory of the dead president, and with fitting expressions of the grief that is felt here no less than elsewhere, Tombstonians observed the day that had been set apart as one of mourning for the tragic end that has overtaken the nation's beloved executive. A general suspension of business was had and joined the entire country in universal mourning. There has not in many years been a death so generally deplored as that of the late president. No man was more popular or more justly honored by all classes, and their grief is universal.

RUINED BY REFUSING.

Burgomaster Who Declined a Challenge to Fight a Duel Ousted from the Military.

Another curious insight into the extraordinary views held in German "society" on the subject of dueling was lately given by the local newspapers of Bad Kreuznach. One day the burgomaster's dog barked at the dog of the doctor. The latter complained about it to the former's wife in so insulting a manner that the burgomaster wrote him an indignant letter. The doctor thereupon challenged his correspondent to a duel, which was refused. Now, the doctor was not an "officer of the reserve," but the burgomaster was, so the former revenged himself by reporting the refusal, whereupon the burgomaster's name was struck off the list of "officers of the reserve," whereby he lost caste and suffered injury in his career.

The Volks Zeitung cites the following as a pendant: An aged woman of the laboring class was sitting alone in her room when a drunken man forced his way into it, abused her with the foulest language and struck her and wounded her till she bled profusely. While this was going on her son returned home, and, very naturally, flew into a rage and rushed at the ruffian whom he did not treat in the gentlest of ways. He was a hard-working, steady fellow, but he was entitled to avenge so cowardly an outrage on any woman, and certainly in this case, as the woman was his aged mother. In his anger he wounded the ruffian with a knife. Although the latter's wounds soon healed the young fellow was dragged before a magistrate and condemned to a year's imprisonment.

The public prosecutor and the magistrate were both of them "officers of the reserve," and they both asserted that "this use of the knife betrayed the brutality of his character, so that he deserved the most severe punishment that it was in the power of the court to give him."

It may be remembered that a few weeks ago a deputy in the German diet was bold enough to state before the house that his majesty the kaiser was ill informed by his entourage and allowed himself to be fed with newspaper cuttings alone, instead of reading whole heaps of the dailies. One of the stock exchange daily papers tells us that the kaiser reads a great many more newspapers than the people think, while the kaiserin devotes an hour a day to this type of literature and keeps her illustrious husband well informed on all subjects of interest.

The professors of the University of Bonn held a meeting recently to which the students were invited. The professor urged that measures should be taken to stop the excessive drinking now in vogue among the students. From their rattle drinking is spreading to all other classes of the population and is well-nigh becoming a vicious fashion in the country. The professors are very earnest in their attempts to stop this. They have appointed a committee, and a government councillor, Herr Quessel, of Cologne, will report on the matter. All the universities in Germany are invited to support the movement, which is chiefly intended to abolish the many rules and methods which oblige the students to drink and which are at the bottom of the "training" for drinking.

BEFORE OUR TIME.

The first photographs were produced in England in 1839, and perfected in 1841.

Stamp collecting is said to owe its origin to a Belgian schoolmaster, who, in order to interest his pupils in geography, had them secure stamps of different countries, and then look up these countries in the atlas and geography.

As far back as February 20, 1738, a "umberella" was imported in the good ship Constantine, as shown by the invoice "for the proper account and risks" of Edward Shippen, who, for aught we know, might have worn that time-worn "umberella" completely out years before Jonas Hanway excited the ire of the London sahmans.

The story that a bronze pen, "ribbed like a modern steel pen," has been found in Pompeii and another of a somewhat different shape at Herculaneum adds another proof to the statement that the Romans did not confine themselves to the stylus. Yet it was not until 1780 that a Birmingham manufacturer named Harrison introduced the metallic pen to England.

Chinese Inspector Loey, who was killed in Tucson, had an excellent insurance policy for $5,000 on his life.

O'Boyle's famous mowers and rakes at Wilson's.

J V Vickers and brother, Stimmer Vickers arrived yesterday. They are here looking up their old friends and will remain several days.

John K Lee was a Tombstone visitor from Glendon yesterday and shaking hands with his many Tombstone friends.

H S Clark representing H H McNeill and Co of Phoenix is a Tombstone visitor on business connected with his firm.

Alex Casey is in the city from Turquoise where he owns some valuable mining property. Mr Casey goes to Tucson tomorrow to look after the building of his property there which he recently purchased.

Judge Jas Reilly returned yesterday from a three month visit to California. The Judge gained nearly 25 lbs in weight and is in an enjoyable trip.

An old time emigrant overland train passed through Tombstone today. Three school cars and several sundry wagons loaded with families and their effects were headed for Sonora by a conductor on the Yaqui river in the land of Marvans.

The Globe Times says it is information, and verily believe, that the great tradition of the Independence of Drizzle Creek, has placed $7,000,000 in the hands of Banker Moffit, of Denver to be invested in Arizona copper properties. Arizona is surely the greatest mining center in the United States, especially when it is copper. And copper is certainly king in the mining world today.

From the figures sent out by the census bureau we may form an idea of the tastes of the people. There are 30,000 grist mills in the country, grinding for people at home and abroad; but thirst takes its place ahead of appetite, there being 40,000 breweries. While eating and drinking people must read, there are 24,916 printing establishments in the United States, over one third the number having been established within the past few years. Bear bread and newspapers line up together.

The dress-maker may rip and tear and still not be a fail.

A YOUNG LADY'S LIFE SAVED.

At Panama, Colon, by Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy.

Dr Charles H. Cutter, a prominent physician of Panama, Colombia, in a recent letter states: "Last March I had a patient a young lady 16 years of age, who had a very bad attack of dysentery. Everything I prescribed for her proved ineffectual, and she was growing worse every hour. Her parents were sure she would die. She had become so weak that she could not turn over in bed. What to do at this critical moment was a study for me, but I thought of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy and as a last resort prescribed it. The most wonderful result was effected. Within eight hours she was feeling much better, inside of three days she was upon her feet and at the end of one week was entirely well." For sale by all dealers in medicine.

THE FINAL SCENES

President McKinley Laid to His Last Rest

AN IMPRESSIVE FUNERAL.

(LATEST TELEGRAMS.)

CANTON.—With majestic solemnity surrounded by his countrymen and his townspeople, in the presence of the United States cabinet, justices of the United States supreme Court, senators and representatives in Congress, heads of military and naval establishments, governors of states, and a great concourse of people who had known and loved him, all that is mortal of the third president to fall by an assassin's bullet was committed to the grave. It was a spectacle of mournful grandeur. Canton seemed to be a town and swelled to the proportions of a great city. 100,000 people were within its gates here, to pay their last tribute to the fallen chief. The final scenes at the First Methodist church, where the final at services were held, and at the beautiful Westlawn Cemetery, where the body was consigned to the vault, were simple and impressive. The Rev C E Manchester then delivered the address, which lasted twenty four minutes, on the life of the late president and the lessons taught by his noble character and death. The services were concluded with the singing of the hymn, which the president repeated on his death bed: "Nearer My God to Thee." The entire congregation arose and joined in the last stanza.

CANTON.—One of the most pathetic features of the funeral was the attendance of Mrs McKinley from the funeral services at the church and cemetery when the body of her husband was laid at rest. Since the first shock of the shooting, then of death, and through the ordeal of state ceremonies, she had borne up bravely. But there was a limit to human endurance and when yesterday came it found her too weak to pass through this ordeal.

CANTON.—President McKinley has left a fortune of not more than $75,000, and at least $50,000 is in cash, in the banks of Washington and Canton. His fortune, except, perhaps, $12,000 has been saved since he was first inaugurated as president.

CANTON.—Mrs McKinley's condition is exciting grave apprehension among those caring for her and it is feared a real collapse may come at any time. Since she has returned to the old home a full realization of the awful calamity has come upon her and a collapse is feared.

London.—Mr Kruger, according to a dispatch to the Daily Mail from Brussels, is preparing a memorial to President Roosevelt soliciting the interference of the United States in South Africa.
